

THE UNIVERSITY
OF CHICAGO
HOSPITALS

Complex Care and Professionalism

To view the video of this transcript, go to:

<http://www.uchospitals.edu/jobs/nursing/videos.html>

Featuring:

Kelly Holdren, RN, BSN, Flight Nurse

Joy Johnican, RN, BSN, Staff Nurse

Ellen Newton, RN, BSN, Nurse Associate

Laurie Rice, RN, MSN, Nurse Practitioner

Nurses at the University of Chicago Hospitals provide state of the art care to patients with complex conditions.

Rice: The nurses here strive to have the best education and the best resources possible, so they can deliver the best care for the patient.

Holdren: I like being able to help people get the patient out and into a higher level of care.

Nurses at the University of Chicago Hospitals are kept intellectually engaged. Their challenging work environment demands critical thinking and utmost professionalism.

Newton: I love the academic environment. We are encouraged to go to conferences and to grow as a nurse and to grow as an employee.

Johnican: There's always something to learn--learning from in-services, from doctors, learning from other staff--and I know that that helps me to be the best nurse that I can be at the University of Chicago.

University of Chicago Nurses. Working at the Forefront of Nursing Excellence.

To learn more about nursing opportunities at the University of Chicago Hospitals, visit:

<http://www.uchospitals.edu/jobs/nursing/>