R. Matthew Galocy, APN

R. Matthew Galocy is a University of Chicago Medicine nurse practitioner. He has been a practicing nurse practitioner for 15 years. He works in collaboration with faculty urologists to provide general urological care, and specializes in prostate and kidney cancer.

Galocy earned his bachelor’s in nursing from Valparaiso University, and received his master’s degree from DePaul University.

Here is a link to his research publications: http://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pubmed/?term=galocy+University+of+Chicago

Amanda A. Bibbings, PA-C, MSPAS, MSHA

Amanda A. Bibbings is a Physician Assistant at the University of Chicago Medicine. She works in collaboration with Gregory Bales, MD, an expert in female urology and reconstructive surgery.

Bibbings earned her bachelor’s degree in marketing, with a minor in biology, from North Central College. She received her Master of Science in Physician Assistant Studies and Master of Science in Health Administration from Rosalind Franklin University.

Bibbings is a member of the American Academy of Physician Assistant and the Illinois Academy of Physician Assistants.

Nisha R. Kumar, RN, APN

Nisha R. Kumar is a nurse practitioner at the University of Chicago Medicine. She works in collaboration with urologic cancer experts Gary D. Steinberg, MD, Norm Smith, MD, and Scott Eggener, MD.

Kumar received her RN and Master of Science, Adult Nurse Practitioner degree from Case Western Reserve University.